

Just a Faded Memory!

You were my life charming and young and everything nice,
Right where I want to be, everything new and running free.

Where are you now?

Where have you gone?

Alone I ask myself how?

I have become this that I have become.

Just a faded memory!

Off in the distance on this cold, cold night

I can see you; feel you, with all of my might.

But, I can barely remember you or me, because I'm just a faded memory!

You were my friend kind and giving always with a hand to lend.

You made me laugh you made me cry you opened up my heart both far and wide.

Recalling words that were spoken,

Remembering how the good times felt so true.

Spoken lies and promises broken

I look but, I don't recognize you because you are a faded memory!

Off in the distance I see a warm summer night. I can see you my friend and I enjoying life.

But, I can barely remember you, you see, because you have become a faded memory!

You were my love, the perfect kind I can only dream of,
The perfect smile upon your face a flawless beauty without a trace.

The whole wide world was in my hands
Then one day you decided it wasn't enough.
And this boy grew into a grieving man.
You left me only dreaming of that perfect love.
Because it has become a faded memory!

Off in the distance I kissed your lips one night.
I can see you my love and that young boy by your side.
But, I can barely remember you and me, *because we are just a faded memory!

Just A Faded Memory!

January 01, 2001